

PLINTH - IPL AUCTION RULEBOOK

Synopsis:

IPL Auction is a real life simulation of the auction which we witness before every IPL season. It will be held in two rounds. First will be a cricket quiz and second round will be an auction between the shortlisted teams based on their first round scores. The aim will be maximising rating given a fixed purse.

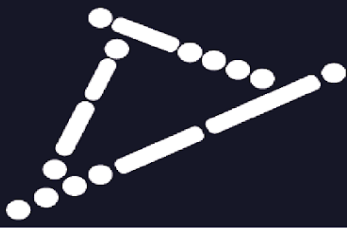

Rules for prelims:

20 questions(pen-paper round)

- Team size: 3
- +1 for each right answer
- No negatives
- 5 Star(*) marked questions to break ties(if any)
- Any use of unfair means will lead to disqualification
- Quiz Master is God(Final decision in case of any disputes lies in the hands of the quizmaster)

Auction rules:

- Top 16 teams will qualify after prelims. We will merge 2 teams into one in order to make 8 IPL franchises.
- 140+ players will be available for bidding in this IPL Auction.
- A database of players up for grabs is based on their performance in the IPL.
- Each team can spend up to 100 crores during the auction; Failing to spend within the limit will lead to disqualification.

- Each player available for the auction has some attributes(credit rating points) from 0 to 100 (0 is worst and 100 is best) based on their stats in IPL. The detailed performance of each player will be shown to you on the projector.
- Each team should manage to have 11 players (with 4-5 batters, 4-5 bowlers, 1-2 All-Rounders, and 1 wicketkeeper), failing which they will be disqualified. Also, few icon players are there in the auction pool; you decide to buy them or not. There is no compulsion to buy them. If any of you purchase the icons, they will be counted in your 11 players themselves.
- When 2 teams are bidding for a player, it is recommended that others not interrupt until any one of them gives up.
- The value (credit rating points) of each player and icon player purchased by the team will be added, and the team with the highest value will be declared the winner.
- There are predefined rules to solve any dispute that may arise in a very rare situation. The decision of the organisers would be final and binding on all.